Rural Community Issues Surrounding Domestic Violence What can we do to help?

From working with clients in a rural community for the past seven years, Harbor House Outreach has learned that not many people like to talk about a topic like domestic violence. Rural community members sometimes fear that others may find out that our "happy home" is not so happy. There are numerous barriers that prevent rural domestic violence victims from obtaining help, such as lack of transportation, isolation, limited resources and long distances to travel.

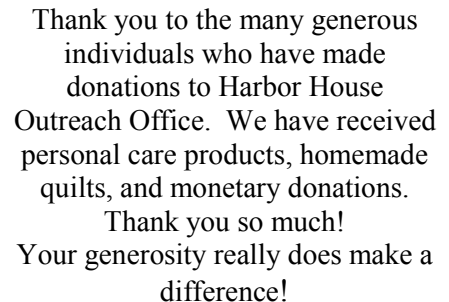

The Harbor House Outreach Office is glad to tell you that there is help in Calumet County. One way to ask for help is to further educate ourselves and our communities. Harbor House does presentations about domestic violence, teen dating, bullying and other subjects relating to domestic violence, in the schools, businesses, faith community, and other organizations. Harbor House is a great resource available in Calumet County. Harbor House and a number of Calumet County community members are in the process of organizing community resources to be available to all residents. Sometimes, all it takes is someone who is willing to listen. Call us at 920-849-7819 or 1-800-970-1171.
